Join us for a free screening of the award-winning documentary LIFE, ANIMATED. The film chronicles the process by which a man with autism uses animated movies to learn communication skills. This film offers a unique opportunity to examine the multidimensional aspects of communication across two very different domains: film and communication disorders.

This event is hosted by the Department of Communication Science and Disorders and the Department of Radio/Television Film. The film showing will be followed by a Q&A discussion moderated by faculty members across the School of Communication. This event is free to students, faculty, staff, alumni, and NUCASLL patients and their families.
